World-renowned Japanese architect Shigeru Ban builds refugee shelters, houses, and cathedrals with a small carbon footprint. The ideology behind his sustainable architectural style is to serve others through innovation.

Ban’s spectacular designs function as emergency shelters using environmentally friendly materials such as:

- Paper tubing and sand-filled bottles in India
- Polycarbonate sheeting in Japan
- Locally available, recyclable materials in Rwanda