“Working through Fulbright in South Korea for two years, I was involved in study, research, and social innovation projects that deepened my interest in the world economy and government service. I view my education at Austin College and the Fulbright award as the two major experiences that helped me establish a healthy worldview and desire to bring about positive change, no matter what industry or sector I might find myself in.”

After Cameron’s Fulbright experience, he served in the U.S. Marine Corps as Scout Sniper Platoon Commander and later Intelligence Officer at 2d Battalion, 6th Marines. He recently transitioned out of the military and will matriculate at the University of Cambridge, Judge Business School in Fall Term 2019.
