Austin College Again Named College That Changes Lives

Revised editions of the book, also including Austin College, were published by Pope in 2000 and 2006. After Pope died in 2008, his family hired Denver-based education writer Hilary Masell Oswald to compile an updated edition of the book. The writer conducted all new school tours, conducting in-depth interviews, and built on Loren Pope’s original work to create a completely updated, more expansive work. There were some changes in the schools included, set at a total of 40 by design.

"We are very pleased that Austin College is included among these 40 exemplary schools," said Austin College President Marjorie Hass. "We work very hard to provide an education with challenging academics supported by expert faculty members whose first priority is their students. The residential community of our campus emphasizes an engagement beyond the classroom, providing opportunities for leadership, collaboration, faculty-directed research, and personal growth. Austin College is a place for students to see themselves and the world with new perspectives -- indeed, changing lives and creating possibilities."

New Students Arrive at Austin College

Faculty, staff, and student leaders welcomed 311 freshmen students who moved into residence halls and began their transition to the new academic year as college students.

Welcome New Faculty
Student Body President Welcome
I Am A Teacher III
Students Learn Through Research
More News

Roh, Sweeney Named Preseason All-Americans

Football players James Roh and Sean Sweeney have been named D3Senior Classic Preseason All-Americans.

Season Preview: Football
Season Preview: Men's Soccer
Season Preview: Volleyball
Season Preview: Women's Soccer
More Athletics News